

PHOTO FEST

The Auckland Festival of Photography is underway with exhibitions all over the city and a hub at Silo Park. The central theme for 2018 is "Control", which makes for some very confronting and thought-provoking works including Beckon us from home, Sarah Blesener's study of "patriotic clubs" in Russia, Ahmer Khan's devastating depictions of the Rohingya crisis, and Jacob Burge's study of modern-day surveillance. In addition to exhibits, there's a programme of public talks including one by award-winning American photojournalist Maggie Steber tomorrow. Until June 22, various locations. See photographyfestival.org.nz for details.
